ARTICULATING THE MORAL COMMUNITY TOWARD A CONSTRUCTIVE ETHICAL PRAGMATISM

Henry S. Richardson

Is morality fixed objectively, independently of all human judgment, or do we “invent” right and wrong? Articulating the Moral Community argues that neither of these simple answers is correct. Its central thesis is that, working within zones of objective indeterminacy, the moral community—the community of all persons—has the authority to introduce new moral norms. This work is part of our Oxford Moral Theory series.

FEATURES

- Offers a new, unprecedented approach to moral theory
- Draws from an unusually wide range of materials and ideas (from Aristotle, Kant, and Dewey; from normative ethics, metaethics, and theories of rights)
- Offers fresh accounts of moral community and its unity, dyadic rights and duties, joint moral reasoning, moral indeterminacy, moral psychology, moral justification, and moral objectivity
